Yoash House, or John Corrie House
Hillsboro
Private

Circa 1790

Near the base of the hill at Hillsboro, overlooking the Tuckahoe Creek, stands a handsome brick bank house, three full stories on the down-hill side. Its double entrance is approached by a tall flight of steps. In form, it is like Brick Mill Landing except for the double entrance doors and position on the hill. Behind the old building is a 20th Century wing built in the style of an early kitchen extension.

The building has two rooms on each floor and they each have fireplaces and original reeded trim around the doors and windows. It is one of the early houses to have been constructed in Hillsboro.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Yoash House is located on the east bank of Tuckahoe Creek along Maryland Alternate Route 404 in the village of Hillsboro. It is a late eighteenth century brick house built in the Federal style.

The brick structure is built into the side of a hill and is two storys on a high foundation. The south facade has a doorway (a later insertion) and a window on the foundation level, two doors and two 9/6 pane windows on the first story, and three 6/6 windows on the second story. The windows have white louvered shutters. This facade has a two bay porch over the doorways on the first floor with a long wood staircase leading to it. The west facade is of Flemish bond (the other facades are common bond) and has a narrow foundation window, a 9/6 window on the first story, a 6/6 window on the second story, and two small windows in the gable. The chimney is built partly outside of the wall on the east gable. A modern frame wing is built on the rear of the house which appears to be one story from its projecting roof on the west, but which acturally extends to a second story behind the house. The interior of the wing and sections of the main house have been remodeled. Prominent wood trim includes reeded window and door frames.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Yoash house is an imposing structure with its vertical visual emphasis and striking exterior staircase to the porch of the south facade. The Flemish bond gable end is a curious feature, orienting the structure to the adjacent Tuckahoe Creek. The Federal characteristics of this late eighteenth century house express the design and craftsmanship of the early architecture of this community.
